GOOD IDEA

When you're there, be present

During the activities you have planned with family or friends, make it a point to turn your phone off, leave it out of sight or in the other room. Look into other's eyes when they are talking to you. Make sure that is the only activity you are doing. Don't check your email, or have a TV in the background. Sit and talk to each other. With our technology-infused culture, this can be difficult. We are so used to turning on the phone when there is a lull in the conversation. But resist the urge and commit to leaving technology untouched a length of time.
